July 2010

We have been experiencing a fairly normal winter so far this year. Prices have been lower than normal on Cauliflower and Broccoli, although this is unlikely to continue for much longer. Courgettes have been very expensive as we waited for the Australian supply to start and the price is now easing. Capsicums are likely to be pricey this year, like they were last year, as the Australian price holds firm.

Seasonal Vegetables

Round Green Beans - We are supplying Australian produce.

Brussels Sprouts - These are available

Yams - These are available.

Courgettes

Australian produce is now available and this has seen the price ease slightly. Quality issues continue to affect the supply.

Tomatoes

Australian Produce again is providing a cheaper product. The quality of the early shipments is good and as the sea freight fruit becomes available we will see a significant price difference with the New Zealand fruit. As with last year we will maintain a small stock of New Zealand Tomatoes for those customers who prefer them, but they will continue to be pricey.

Yams

We supply a local grade of Yam, grown in the Manawatu. These provide a nutritious and tasty vegetable for your winter menus. We can supply different varieties of Yams, on request, from our contracted Yam Grower. These can be used in addition to our variety of winter vegetable mixes

Good Buying
